About Zeldathon

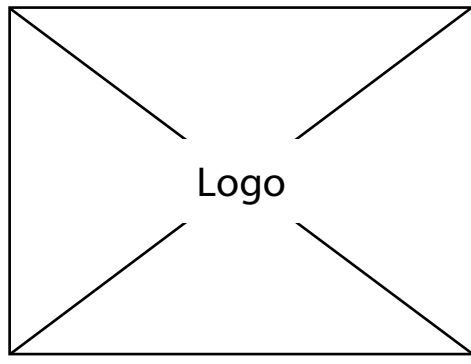

Zeldathon was founded in fall of 2009 by Matthew "MC" Moffit and Zak Ondish. After being inspired by other charity gaming marathons such as The Speed Gamers, MC suggested to Ondish that they do the same over winter break, but with their favorite game series: The Legend of Zelda.

Following their first marathon, which raised $301, MC and Zak weren't feeling too motivated to create another event. However, the sole visitor of the first marathon, Robin "1862011" Coddington wanted to work with them on a second marathon for his high school senior project. MC agreed to help Robin, and together they planned and executed a second marathon in the summer. Since then, over 100 gamers from across the world have joined MC on The Zeldathon Team, with the latest marathon hosting over 80 attendees.

About

785 million people live without clean water. That's nearly 1 in 10 people worldwide, or, twice the population of the United States without access to life's most basic human need. The majority live in isolated rural areas and spend hours every day walking to collect water for their family. Not only does walking for water keep kids out of school and take up time that parents could be using to earn money, but the water often carries diseases that make them sick.

When a community gets access to clean water, it can change just about everything. It can improve health, increase access to food, grow local economies, and help kids spend more time in school.

These efforts play a critical role in helping our clients recover and maintain their health and independence.

Since 1983, we have helped thousands of people raise millions of dollars for Help Hope Live to pay a wide range of expenses, including out-of-pocket costs for: medications, durable medical equipment, home health care, wheelchair-accessibility modifications, physical therapy, innovative treatments, medical travel and temporary relocation, even emergency living assistance.

Annually, we help place medical care within reach of about 3,000 families across the nation.

Families never receive a bill from St. Jude for treatment, travel, housing or food — because all a family should worry about is helping their child live.

Treatments invented at St. Jude have helped pushing the overall childhood cancer survival rate from 20% to more than 80% since it opened more than 50 years ago.

About

We recognize that there are two types of conservation programs, and both are equally essential for lasting protections that sustain nature for the benefit of all life on Earth.

The first kind of program is on-the-ground teams defending critically threatened species and places from imminent destruction. Only through such mud-on-boots actions can we ensure that there is a wild world left to protect in the future.

The problem is that interventions like these are costly, and increasingly difficult to sustain for the long haul.

That is why a second approach to conservation is needed, one that counters the root causes harming nature which include a lack of respect for Earth's wildlife and wilderness, and lack of coordination for their protection.

This is what WILD does best.
